NOTABLE PERSONAGES OF THE TRAGEDY THAT HAS SHOCKED THE CIVILIZED WORLD

These photographs were taken on the deck of the Lusitania just before she sailed from New York last Saturday and after the warning had been given by the German embassy.

ALFRED G. VANDERBILT, millionaire sportsman, who is reported to have perished after heroically giving up his seat in a lifeboat to a woman with a baby.

ELBERT HUBBARD, writer and philosopher, one of the American's contributing editors, who is reported missing. Upon sailing, Mr. Hubbard made light of the warning issued.

CHARLES FROHMAN, celebrated theatrical manager, whose body has been recovered, it is announced officially by the U. S. consul at Queenstown.

CHARLES E. PAYNTER, noted artist, whose name appears among those of the survivors. Mr. Paynter was on his way back to England after a visit here.

DECIDED ACTION BY U. S. IS FORECAST

WASHINGTON, May 8.—After a conference with the President at the White House tonight, Secretary Tumulty said:

"Of course the President feels the distress of the situation to the utmost and is considering, very earnestly, but very calmly, the right course of action to pursue. He knows that the people of the country wish and expect him to act with deliberation as well as with firmness."

GERMANY ADMITS ACT OF SUBMARINE

BERLIN, via wireless to London, May 8.—The following official communication was issued tonight:

"The Cunard liner Lusitania was yesterday torpedoed by a German submarine and sunk."

"The Lusitania was naturally armed with guns, as were recently most of the English mercantile steamers. Moreover, as is well known here, she had large quantities of war material in her cargo."

"Her owners, therefore, knew to what danger the passengers were exposed. They alone bear all the responsibility for what has happened."

"Germany, on her part, left nothing undone to repeatedly and strongly warn them. The imperial ambassador in Washington even went so far as to make a public warning, so as to draw attention to this danger. The English press entered at the warning and relied on the protection of the British fleet to safeguard Atlantic traffic."

Three Explosions Before Liner Sunk; Few First-Class Passengers Escaped.

LONDON, May 8.—Twelve hundred and fifty-six persons lost their lives in the Lusitania disaster, of whom 115 were Americans, according to the most careful figures which can be compiled.

The bodies of Charles Frohman, the theatrical manager, Dr. F. S. Pearson of New York and Charles Plamondon have been recovered. Officially given up as dead are:

Alfred G. Vanderbilt, multimillionaire.
Charles Klein, playwright.
Justus M. Forman, playwright.
Elbert Hubbard, writer.

Mrs. Hubbard.
American Consul Frost at Queenstown today reported to the American Embassy here that it is safe to place the total number of survivors at 645. The Cunard Company, in a revised list of those aboard, stated they were 1,251 and 650 crew, a total of 1901. Of the 188 Americans aboard, Consul Frost reports that he can account for but 73 saved.

Save But Few of Lusitania's First Class Passengers

VANDERBILT, KLEIN, HUBBARD, FORMAN, GIVEN UP FOR DEAD

The consul said probably upwards of 1,200 bodies had not been recovered. He added that persons not listed by him to the embassy are "almost to a certainty dead." None of the prominent Americans on board are included in the consul's lists.

In the morgue at Queenstown are bodies of 159 victims, of whom the following American dead have been identified:

Charles Frohman.
Charles Plummer.
Dr. F. H. Pearson.
Mrs. May Brown.
J. Spillman.
P. L. Jones.
Hessie Hare.
George Arthur.
David Samuels (or Samuel Eese).
T. B. King.
W. H. Brown, Jr.
J. V. McCormick (probably Mainmain).
Miss McBerth.

Patrick Callon of Chicago.
Arthur Foley of Trenton, N. J.
Mrs. Annella MacDonald.
LIST OF PROBABLE VICTIMS.

The official list also contains the following names of probable American victims:

Miss Mary Grunsdon.
William Robert Bawne.
It is believed tonight that almost all, if not all the survivors have been brought ashore. Reports have been received of others picked up by fishing vessels, but these are unconfirmed.

One rumor from Cork said two schooners are on their way to English ports with 200 survivors, but this is not credited.

In the list of dead probably will be added the names of many survivors now in hospitals at Queenstown who are not expected to survive the shock of the disaster.

British and American officials are doing everything in their power to aid the suffering and ascertain the truth of the situation. Officials of the Cunard line are also assisting them.

Ambassador Page has ordered the American Consul at Queenstown to care for the bodies and give financial assistance to survivors who need it. Two army officers have been sent to assist the consul in his work.

CRAFT SEARCH FOR BODIES

Admiral Cocke, in charge of the naval district, has ordered every available craft under his command to search for bodies. Other vessels are scouring the coast and the villages are being canvassed in an effort to learn if there are any further survivors.

Representatives of Alfred G. Vanderbilt have arranged for a fleet of tug boats to search for his body, while their agents ashore are visiting every point where he might possibly have been taken or picked up alive.

The Lusitania lies a twisted mass of wreckage in sixty fathoms of water and will never be raised, according to Marine Superintendent Dodd of the Cunard line. Efforts probably will be made in the future to recover her treasure.

Captain Turner, commander of the Lusitania, so far has refused to make any formal statement. He remarked with quiet irony on landing: "Well, it is the fortune of war."

He secluded himself in apartments over the town bank last night, but was able to be about in uniform today.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, Liverpool reports, gave up his life like a thoroughbred. As the boats were going over the side, a place was offered him. He gave it up to a woman with a small baby, and the reports say she has been landed at Queenstown.

The survivors likewise say that Major F. Warren Pearl of New York was a tower of strength in the first panic, quieting the excited passengers.

Of the crew of the Lusitania, only one out of eight, proportionately, was saved. Among the passengers, something less than half survived.

The loss of life was especially heavy in the first cabin. Lady Mackworth was one of many who went down with the ship, but was carried to the surface by her life belt and eventually rescued.

Captain W. T. Turner went down with his ship, but he, too, fought to the surface and was picked up.

It is said there were a number of British destroyers near, that the destroyers heard the explosion and sought the submarine, but that no trace of the attacking craft was found.

An aftermath of the disaster will be a Parliamentary inquiry. England is aroused. Reprisals are demanded. But the British Admiralty is not escaping without blame.

It is charged that the proper precautions to protect the liner were not taken. It is claimed that not a rescue ship reached the spot till three hours after the Lusitania sank. Many assert that the liner should have been convoyed. Winston Churchill is receiving the greater share of the blame.

The Germans are believed to have used special torpedoes of extra high power against the Lusitania.

How the Lusitania was sunk, the story of the fight to save the passengers, the struggle for life in the water after the giant liner disappeared—the story of what happened in the great marine tragedy was related today by survivors. While there is much corroboration in this narrative, from them have been gathered facts which, when assembled, form a story which stands only second to that of the Titanic disaster.

The Lusitania was steaming along on the last leg of her voyage to Liverpool, making sixteen knots. It was about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The day was clear and calm. The sun was shining brightly. It was a beautiful day at sea. In the morning the speed of the vessel had been reduced by Captain Turner off Fastnet, probably in fear of scattered mines.

Sharply at 2:05 the signal was given from the bridge: "Full speed ahead."

The liner plunged forward under the new impetus. The whole of the ship's company seemed to feel the thrill of the new movement. Passengers on deck flocked to the side.

Suddenly a cry rose from scattered points of vantage on the starboard side.

"There's a submarine!"

About a thousand yards off the starboard bow passengers saw breaking the sun-glinted surface the sleek hull of a dreaded underwater craft. It rested, poised for but a moment on the surface, then it disappeared.

This apparition was the only warning given.

There was an impetuous rush to the side of the ship. On the saloon deck faces reflected more of surprise than fear. Among other classes excitement fast gained head, and panic was incipient.

The first flush of the excitement had just passed when there arose a more ominous cry from the watchers.

"There's a torpedo coming straight at us!"

From the point where the submarine sank a great white streak—the track of the torpedo, was traced. It was aimed slightly ahead of the Lusitania, but as the liner plunged forward at great speed the track seemed to steer more and more toward a point amidships until it struck fair between the first and second funnels with a dull thud.

There was a great tearing of metal, followed by a terrific explosion in the stoke hole. The ship trembled from stem to stern. The decks seemed to rise underfoot. Then the liner settled as if sorely wounded.

About a thousand yards off the starboard bow passengers saw breaking the sun-glinted surface the sleek hull of a dreaded underwater craft. It rested, poised for but a moment on the surface, then it disappeared.

This apparition was the only warning given.

A great column of steam and water rose and coal and wood and steel splinters hurled high and fell in an avalanche upon the upper deck.

The liner appeared to falter as if, wounded, it still was making a mighty effort to struggle on. Then it steadied as the helm was swung over and her course was directed for land.

But before she could answer to her helm a second torpedo pierced her bow. A period variously estimated at from one to four minutes intervened between the two. Some passengers state that not only a second but a third torpedo struck the ship. It is generally believed, however, that the explosion of the second torpedo was mistaken for the impact of a third.

By this time, despite the torn hull, the Lusitania was making twenty-one knots.

It was while the ship was plowing along at this speed, with a heavy list to starboard, that the orders were given immediately after the second missile struck to lower the boats.

In this task the crew apparently upheld the best traditions of British mercantile marine. But, despite their best efforts, hundreds of lives were lost.

Among the saloon passengers relative calm prevailed. It was the generally accepted idea that the Lusitania would float and that there was no immediate danger. Cool heads counseled calm and the more timorous were quieted, with the result that many of the cabin passengers who might have been saved went to their staterooms leisurely, some even waiting at the table until luncheon was concluded as an example of coolness.

Below the scenes were widely different. Women, many of them with babies in their arms, became panic-stricken. Officers and passengers did their best to calm them, assisting them to the boat stations.

Fumes arising from the explosion permeated the ship and many felt unconscious to the deck. Others, dazed by the catastrophe, were helpless in their panic or fear and had to be assisted to the side.

Meanwhile the crew struggled valiantly to lower boats. But because of the high speed of the vessel and the heavy list, the boats fouled the davits and could not be swung out to clear the side.

Knives and hatchets were resorted to to cut the boats away, and finally upwards of twenty boats were put into the water. Several of these were swamped when they struck the water; others were capsized in the swell of the ship.

Life belts had been distributed among the passengers, but many passengers did not wait to equip themselves with the preservers. Some tumbled over the side and were knocked unconscious when they struck; others leaped with their own hands to overturned boats, there to await the coming of other swimmers to right the craft.

Slowly the Lusitania filled forward. At each revolution of the engines which still drove her at undiminished speed, due to the steam pipes from the engines being severed south of the explosion of the second torpedo, her bow dipped deeper into the water.

Finally the bow liner slowed down and seemed to settle as if she had run her race and was spent.

One decker wild-eyed men and women clung to the last hope that they would be taken off. The wireless apparatus still operated, its call for help with clock-like rhythm. On the bridge stood Captain Turner with his executive officer beside him, directing the hopeless fight. In the water men and women struggled for their lives. Boats pulled away one after the other. Five boats remained entangled at the davits.

With a final lunge forward, the Lusitania sank.

No more than twenty minutes had elapsed since the torpedo struck her.

She went down by the head.

As the big liner took her final plunge most of those remaining on deck leaped, and many were life belts; others jumped as they saw them struck the sides. Others jumped clear and struck away.

It was here that most of the lives were lost.

A swirling maelstrom closed in, sucking with it hundreds upon hundreds of lives. Five of her boats went with the ship.

Many of the boats were overturned and were righted with great difficulty. To others still bottom up swimmers clung, helplessly. Many clung to wreckage. Boats as yet unfilled cruised about picking up the survivors.

FOSS WILL AGAIN RUN FOR GOVERNOR

Will Seek G. O. P. Nomination on a Platform of Prohibition and Reciprocity.

Augustus N. Foss, former Governor of Massachusetts, today announced that he will run for Governor of the Commonwealth in 1916. He will campaign on a platform of prohibition and reciprocity.

His claim for reelection will be based primarily on the record during the three years of administration and, secondarily, on the platform of prohibition and reciprocity. The platform of prohibition is the one which Foss has been most successful in carrying out.

It is also claimed by the former Governor that the record during the three years of administration will show that the Commonwealth is in a better position than when he first took office.

From a national standpoint, the former Governor will maintain that the United States is in a better position than when he first took office.

Mr. Foss will not run as an independent, but as a member of the Republican party. He will campaign on a platform of prohibition and reciprocity.

End Burrage Betrothal Big Surprise to Society

Miss Elizabeth A. Burrage, whose engagement to Stuart L. Bullivant, a Yale junior, is broken by mutual consent.

Engagement was Announced at Tea Last November on Day of Yale's Victory Over Brown.

The engagement of Miss Elizabeth A. Burrage and Stuart L. Bullivant, which was announced last November, is broken for reasons best known to the young couple themselves.

Miss Burrage is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Burrage of No. 214 Commonwealth avenue and South Street, Boston.

Mr. Bullivant, a junior at Yale, is the youngest son of William H. Bullivant of West Newton. Inquiry was made yesterday at the Boston office of William H. Bullivant, Stuart L. Bullivant's father, as to the reason for the breaking off of the engagement.

It was a brother of Stuart. You can say that Stuart is not to marry Miss Burrage. About a month ago Miss Burrage and her brother were in the city. They were in the city. They were in the city.

The engagement of Miss Burrage and Stuart L. Bullivant was announced to society on November 7. This was the day when the Brown University football eleven went to New Haven and was licked by the Yale team.

Young Mr. Bullivant did not stay in New Haven to see that important match, for he had much more interesting business in Boston. He came up to Boston and was present at a tea given by Miss Burrage to announce their betrothal.

About fifty of the younger set were present and congratulations were showered on the Yale junior. The telephone wire flashed up the news in due time that afternoon of Yale's victory over Brown and that made matters all the merrier.

But, come to the present, the engagement of Mr. Bullivant's brother, the couple have agreed that the engagement had no longer be.

SOX MARKS SHATTERED IN BIG COLLEGE GAMES AT STADIUM

BRAVES' RALLY BEATS GIANTS IN 11TH, 4-3

By A. M. C. MITCHELL.
In exactly the same way that the Red Sox won from Washington on Joe Boelling's wild pitch last Wednesday, the Braves won an eleven-inning battle from the Giants at Fenway Park yesterday afternoon. With men on ground and third, one out, and the score a tie, Pitcher Schauer of the Giants cut the first ball pitched to Connolly into the dirt. It caromed off Chief Meyers' shoulder, bouncing high toward the box seats, and Gilbert, who was on third scampered home with the winning run, which ended the game in the Braves' favor, 4 to 3.

THRILLING FINISH TO GAME.
The tenth Boston batted like a team. Moran walked, but was thrown out at first base. Smith's single fly ball came between Murray and Schauer, and the Braves scored. The Giants' pitcher, Schauer, was in a bad way. He had a wild pitch, and the Braves scored again. The game was a close one, and the Braves won in the eleventh inning.

Millions of eyes earnestly search the firmament; Thousands of telescopes sweep the spaces; Giant observatories play from horizon and zenith, watching for a new star.

Whenever you see a new writer in Cosmopolitan, you know a star of major magnitude has risen—

The kind millions of readers earnestly search for; The kind thousands of literary agents sweep the countries for; The kind editorial magnates search for ceaselessly.

JOHN GALSWORTHY has attained to Cosmopolitan's table of contents.

A pitiable piece of feminine foetism; An inscrutable spouse of a policeman; A weak brother with Cain's scarlet hands; A strong brother with the lordly pride of "Cand"—

With these pawns in a master drama of tragedy, love and mystery, John Galsworthy makes a feature number of June Cosmopolitan.

It is Galsworthy at his meridian, a genius story fittingly illustrated by the pen of artists, A. I. Keller.

But this is only ONE of NINE great features of the one big magazine of the month.

HE'S A REGULAR BOY.

Some magazine writer was out here the other day trying to get him to say that his baby was going to be trained for a boxer.

When he grows up he can box if he wants to, because I believe in it. But my idea is to make a farmer out of him.

That is for training my little Jess to fight. The only thing he has ever had was with his baby sisters, and he hasn't yet won a decision.

The picture of Jess, Jr., was taken at the Willard home, No. 5333 Gregory avenue, Hollywood, and the 'baby' was shown that he was decidedly a regular boy by trying to take the photographs.

TOURING OF NEW ENGLAND MOST POPULAR

Touring Season to Be Inaugurated by Meeting of the American Automobile Association.

New England is confidently looking forward to an increased number of road visitors, despite the fact that this year the rail of the North-east is being run at a special rate for the first time.

With nearly two million car owners now traveling the highways, it is safe to say that many thousands of them will be on the roads during the coming season. The American Automobile Association, which has been the leading organization in the country for the promotion of touring, is now in the process of organizing a series of official parties of the road, which will be held in New England, New York, and Pennsylvania. The parties will be held in the following order: New England, May 15; New York, May 22; Pennsylvania, May 29. The parties will be held in the following order: New England, May 15; New York, May 22; Pennsylvania, May 29.

The 1915 Ford.

Has Cowl Dash, Curved Rear
Fenders and Increased Magnet Power.

THE Ford Motor Company make a very definite statement that there is no new Ford and that the car of today is the same as it was seven years ago, with the exception of added refinements.

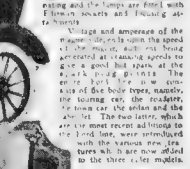

Further, they point out that the change in the design of the 1915 Ford is the same as the change in the design of the 1914 Ford, which is a matter of course.

Conspicuous Values in the Motor World

There has never been a year in the history of the motor car industry in which a more general and widespread interest in the subject has been shown than in the present year.

The reason for this is not hard to find. It is the fact that the motor car has become a part of the life of the people, and that it is no longer a luxury, but a necessity.

Three Attractive Body Designs

The Premier Motor Manufacturing Company has just added three attractive body designs to the stock models, which will be a real contribution to the motor car.

The new designs are a three-passenger model, a four-passenger model, and a five-passenger model.

DRIVE ON RIGHT SIDE OF THE ROAD

Many motorists who have occasion to drive in and out of the city and who are not familiar with the law and the custom of the country, are often puzzled by the rule that they must drive on the right side of the road.

Maxwell "The Wonder Car"

Only a Blindfolded man would buy an automobile today without looking the Maxwell over

We give the two vital things in the Maxwell Car, and then the 17 new features, that have made the 1915 Maxwell, the most talked about car ever produced.

Here are the two vital things that any sane man wants when he buys an automobile—

In the first place
—a handsome, real automobile, that he can be proud to ride in.

In the second place
—a powerful, fast, economical automobile, that will take him anywhere and bring him back.

We give these two vital things and just about every other detail of refinement, comfort, and endurance.

When you buy a 1915 Maxwell, you buy an exact duplicate of the stock Maxwell Cars, in which "Wild Bill" Turner, and Billy Carlson broke two World's Records, in two of the toughest, roughest mountain hill-climbs ever made—Mt. Hamilton and Mt. Wilson.

Then too, you get a car made by the same designers—the same chief engineer—from the same Maxwell Laboratory-tested, heat-treated steel, that was used in the Maxwell Racers in which Barney Oldfield and Billy Carlson finished first, and second, in the Venice Grand Prix Race, and made 300 miles non-stop race records at Venice, Corona and San Diego.

SALES IN REAL ESTATE MARKET SHOW INCREASE

Interest in Market Shifts from Mercantile to Residential Property.

TREMONT ST. PARCEL SOLD

Interest in the real estate market has shifted from the mercantile to the residential side, according to a report from the Boston American. The report states that the market for residential property has shown a marked increase in sales, particularly in the Tremont street area. The report also notes that the market for mercantile property has been relatively flat, with only a few sales reported. The report further states that the increase in residential sales is due to a number of factors, including a general improvement in the economy and a shift in the tastes of the public. The report also notes that the market for residential property is expected to continue to show an increase in sales for some time to come.

Mrs. Herbert Lyman Joins Anti-Suffrage Campaign and Goes on Speaking Tour

Mrs. Lyman was Miss Ruth B. Whitney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Whitney of Brookline and Cohasset. She spent two years at Bryn Mawr College, and since she came out has been prominent in the doings of society.

Her husband is treasurer of the famous Merrimac Mills at Lawrence, and also a director or stockholder in other large cotton manufacturing organizations.

An audience of men and women attired in the flowing-robed Grecian costume will prove the novel feature of the outdoor play, "The Strife of the Sea Children and the Tree Children for the First Child to be given to the Sea," June 15, at the Lutz Anderson stage in the new auditorium of the American Drama Society.

The production is a dance-play in four acts.
Miss Charlotte Porter of No 11 Queensway Street, the noted writer, who dramatized "Balantine's Adventure," recently given by the Pioneering Society, has general charge of the Greek production. Miss Perla Godfrey, who recently took part, with much success, in "Pyramion and Galathea," given at the Toy Theatre by the Society of Colonial Families, will play the leading part of "Earth Child."

This month of roses will also be a month of brides, of outdoor fetes, Country Club races, class day functions and college races, so that the quietude of a North or South Shore cottage or the inland farm will be pretty alluring to the weary society matron and the exhausted hudd about July first.

Mrs. Teller took her chosen "day" late last or last Friday to Baltimore (Madelon Taylor's annual Naturally, great interest was shown in this coming wedding, for young Morgan is the son of the present U. S. Senator from Maryland, and the groom is of the late President's family. The ceremony will be performed at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Morgan, at 100 Madison street, at 10 o'clock.

The Bacon-Norman nuptials will be a North Shore society event of an extraordinary order. The bride, Miss Tudor, is a daughter of the late Mr. Norman, a prominent New York City banker, and the groom, Mr. Tudor, is a member of the same family.

The wedding of Miss Ruth Gaston and John Kenneth Howard of Boston took place at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Gaston, 125 West 12th street, on Saturday, June 12. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. J. J. O'Connell, pastor of the Holy Trinity church. The bride was accompanied by her father, and the groom by his father, Mr. J. J. Howard. The wedding party consisted of the bride, groom, best man, maid of honor, bridesmaids, flower girls, ring bearers, and ushers. The reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents. The wedding was a private affair, with only close family and friends in attendance.

MOVEMENTS OF THE SOCIAL SET

So it is essential that corsets be kept up-to-the-minute, and that is one of the reasons why so many thousands demand Royal Worcester corsets. Women know them. They buy and wear them always with the assurance they are right and reflect the latest style notes.

Observe for example, the shortened skirt to cultivate renewed freedom of stride, the higher bust line, the franker curve of the waist, the dainty flatness of the back. Prices range from $1 to $3.

Style 583 (upper view)

Gives the average figure stylish lines. Cost. Sizes 18 to 30. Price 7c.

Style 548 (lower view)

A Madonna Spared Almost Miraculously by the Shells in a Convent at Termonde.

THE one American war correspondent who was permitted to visit the advanced British position at Neuve Chapelle, on the battle front, wrote:

"To see Neuve Chapelle by daylight is to see the most fearful example of the power of modern artillery fire yet witnessed. No village is left; only hashed bricks and mortar, with the exception of half a dozen houses which were hit several times. After knocking the buildings to pieces the British shells kneaded and pulverized the remains."

"Yet two objects stood practically un-harmd amidst that low sky line of ruins—two effigies of Christ on the cross, of the type familiar to travelers in France. Eight-inch shells had excavated enormous holes on either side of the base of one. While other trees in the town had been cut in two and splintered and gashed, four small evergreen shrubs around the other effigy had been undisturbed. Many soldiers remarked the curious phenomenon. Indeed, the soldiers talked much of it." The same remarkable fact, the sparing of sacred effigies, statues and shrines, has been observed in many other places on the shell-torn battle line. It has naturally strengthened the belief among pious people that these sacred objects are miraculously protected from destruction.

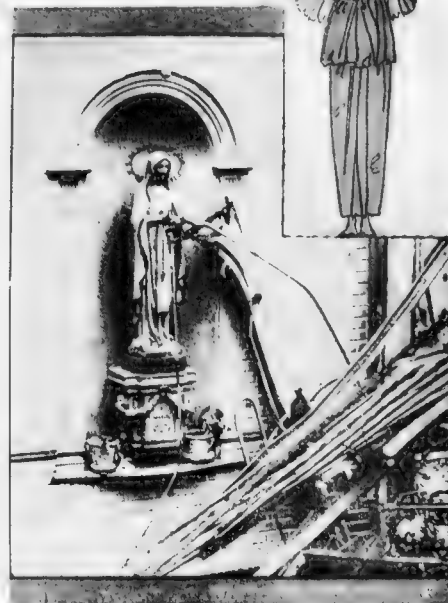

The Church of Notre Dame, in the town of Albert, in Northern France, was nearly shot to pieces by German shells. Upon the top of the tower was a statue of the Blessed Virgin, holding the Infant Saviour in her arms. It was the most conspicuous object in the whole town.

A German shell party smashed the framework that held in place the pedestal of the statue, with the result that it fell to the position shown in the accompanying photograph, suspended at right angles to the tower.

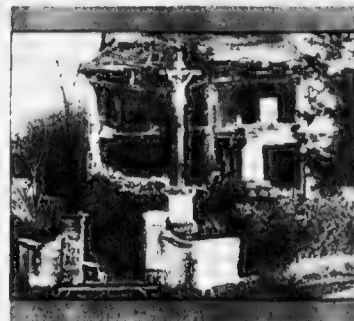

The Virgin appears to be holding out the Divine Babe in silent appeal over the stricken city, beseeching the Almighty for protection of its inhabitants. Strange to say, since this occurred the German army has been driven back to a considerable distance from Albert.

At Termonde, in Belgium, the church was nearly blown to pieces, but a very ancient shrine representing the women at the tomb of the Saviour was spared.

On this page is presented photographic evidence of the most striking instances in which these sacred statues have been almost miraculously preserved from destruction.

How You Can PLAY TUNES ON YOUR GAS JETS

MUSIC Like a PIPE ORGAN Made by the Vibrations of FLAME Instead of AIR

ALFRED T. PYNNE, a Pittsburgh business man, has discovered a way to play tunes on gas jets. He has invented a device which will allow the vibrations of the flame of a gas jet to be converted into musical notes. The device is a small, portable, and simple in construction. It consists of a gas jet, a series of tubes, and a set of keys. The gas jet is connected to a series of tubes, each of which is connected to a key. When a key is pressed, the gas flows through the tube, and the flame vibrates, producing a musical note. The device is capable of playing a wide variety of tunes, and is a great addition to any home or office.

The diagram shows a keyboard with eight keys, each connected to a tube of a different length. The tubes are arranged in a series, and the gas flows through them in sequence. The length of the tubes is such that the vibrations of the flame produce a complete octave of musical notes. The device is a simple and effective way to play music on gas jets.

Why SWEET POTATOES Are SWEET

It is beginning that what we call sweet potatoes are really very sweet. During the growth the roots contain a large amount of starch, but as the season advances, the starch is converted into sugar. This is why sweet potatoes are so sweet. The process of conversion is called "ripening," and it is a natural process that occurs in all plants. The ripening process is controlled by the temperature and the amount of light the plant receives. Sweet potatoes are a great source of food, and they are also a great source of sugar.

BIG HEADS ARE NOT ALWAYS Signs of CLEVERNESS

THE big head is a common sight. It is a sign of intelligence, and it is a sign of strength. But it is not always a sign of cleverness. There are many people with big heads who are not very clever. The size of the head is not a reliable indicator of intelligence. Intelligence is a complex thing, and it is not always reflected in the size of the head. The size of the head is determined by a number of factors, including genetics and environment. Intelligence is determined by a number of factors, including genetics and environment.

A black and white portrait of a woman, likely a film star, wearing a dark hat and a thick fur collar. The portrait is set within an oval frame. The woman is looking slightly to the right. The background is dark and indistinct. The overall style is characteristic of early 20th-century photography.

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a review of the literature on the effects of the environment on health. It starts with a general overview of the field, followed by a more detailed discussion of the role of the environment in the development of chronic diseases. The second part of the paper focuses on the specific issue of air pollution and its impact on respiratory health. This section includes a critical analysis of the evidence linking air quality to asthma and other lung conditions. Finally, the third part of the paper discusses policy implications and potential interventions to reduce environmental risks to public health.

New Things Every Woman Ought to Know

Another Useful Lesson in Home Dressmaking

No. 7 of the Series of Valuable Articles Written Especially for This Newspaper by Mrs. Minnie Berry

A FTH sleeve has been fitted and all necessary alterations made, it is ready for sewing. The seam should be stitched a little outside of the basing line. Then clip and pull out all basings, and press on a sleeve board, over-cast all seams closely, excepting on soft, sheer materials; such seams are best bound or French seamed.

A close fitting sleeve may serve as a lining on to drape an outside sleeve. Shirt waist sleeves may be long and tight, or short and tight, or in regular skirt style. Sometimes a one-piece dress sleeve has a dart below the elbow at the back of the sleeve, which helps to fit it closely. Sometimes one side of the seam is longer than the other, this allowance should be eased in at the bend of the arm.

Never lengthen or shorten a sleeve at upper or lower edge, unless the alteration is slight. A simple plan is to slit the sleeve pattern above the elbow for lengthening the upper part, and below the elbow for lengthening the lower part. Then lay the pieces on the lining or material to be cut, with enough space between them to gain the desired length.

For shortening a sleeve, fold it across midway above or below the elbow, in a tuck, to the length desired. To shorten or lengthen a sleeve for sleeves, make the alteration midway above or below the elbow.

By following this rule, the shape of the sleeve will be spoiled. For when a sleeve is cut off at the upper edge it loses a proper shape and becomes too short at that part, causing it to draw.

If cut off at the lower part it remains too wide and not the proper shape at the wrist.

For short sleeves a sleeve must have a long, rounded top. For long sleeves this top portion is shorter.

Be sure to have the "cutting line" in the sleeve a line of three perpendiculars always on straight lengthwise thread of material.

On a well fitting sleeve all parts fall naturally. Sleeves are best made with ornamental cuffs of lace, embroidery or contrasting material.

A wide or narrow piping of the material or of trimming in the form of a cuff is a suitable finish. The simplest and plainest of all cuffs is the band cuff. This is cut straight and fits the portion of the arm where the lower edge of sleeve ends. It may be cut on a double fold of material, or with inside and outside sections, this side is basted to the sleeve, so that the seam comes on the right side, and the other side is turned over this and stitched on the right side of the sleeve.

Shirt waist cuffs are often made like the band cuff, and for starching are interfaced with buckram.

Long sleeves should fit closely at the wrist, whether they fit loosely above it or are tight. They may be secured by making an opening of any length desired at the back. Underface the edges of the opening, buttonhole loops to use eyes and new buttons at the other edge. Pretty buttons may be made of small brass or bone rings, buttonholed and basted to inside. The sleeve material cross stitch over the space in the eye, and make a small wheel over the stitches at the centre to hold them together, then sew the button on the outside.

A neat clasp for a lace sleeve may be made by cutting a loop and binding with narrow strips of material. The material must be cut on the straight and the sewing must be neat and carefully done. Fancy buttons or covered moulds are used.

To cover a mould, cut a circle of material a bit more than $\frac{1}{2}$ of larger all around than the outline of the mould. Push a little bit of surgon's cotton through the hole in the mould's centre, and stretch it evenly over the face of the mould.

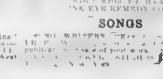

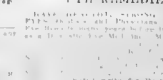

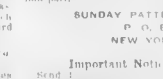

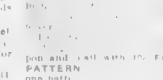

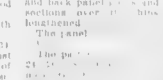

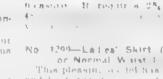

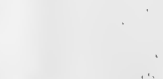

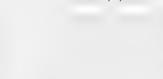

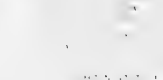

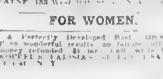

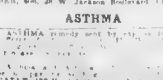

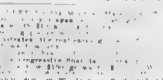

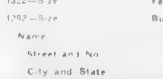

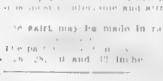

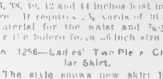

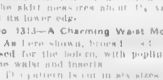

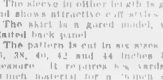

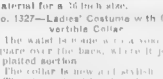

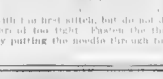

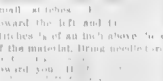

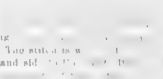

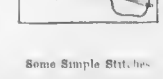

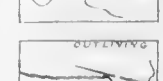

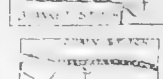

Gather at less than $\frac{1}{4}$ inch from the circle of material, place over the mould, and draw up the thread. Be sure to keep the thread at an even distance from the edge of the mould, and with the gathers even, so face and finished edges will be smooth.

Sew back and forth across under side of the button to strengthen it, and then the button is ready for sewing on.

Neat and pretty sleeves on all over lace may be used in such of the edges of sleeves or cuffs. They may be joined to the edge or applied on the material.

They cord piping of material with a wrill or lace edge will finish a sleeve prettily.

Loops are made as follows: Use buttonhole twist, and insert the needle at the edge of the sleeve opening at a point where the loop is desired. Draw the needle through the material, and pull it up to the top of the loop, which equals the button's diameter. The loop must be long enough to slip over the button easily. Insert the needle again in the starting point, so as to make two strands for the loop, fasten the

SUNDAY AMERICAN EXAMINER PATTERNS

WHEN one sees how becoming Empire styles are to youthful girlish figures one does not wonder at their popularity; and they combine so well with the jaunty little boleros.

Smart shirtwaists have yoke sections, sometimes cut in one with the back, and again joined in pointed, round or straight outline to the back and front portions of the waist.

There are many new "fanciers" in sleeves, and sometimes the altering of a sleeve makes an old one a new one. There are dress cuffs with points and without; levels, loose, bell-shaped short sleeves, and the snug, smart, close-fitting model, which are so trim and neat, with added shaped cuffs or facings.

Junior suits for girls show over blouse and jacket styles, and all perfume effects, and are very popular on dresses for young misses.

No. 1322—Girls' Dress With or Without Over Blouse.

As here shown, white linen was used, with the waist fronts embroidered in blue.

The over blouse is cut in jacket style and with deep front opening. The back is slashed to hold the grille, which may be omitted. The skirt is gored and laid in deep pleats at the seams.

The pattern is cut in four sizes—10, 12, 14 and 16 years. It requires 8 yards of 24-inch material for a 14-year size.

No. 1324—A Group of New Sleeves.

These styles comprise the latest sleeve forms. No. 1 and No. 3 show a good sleeve for shirtwaists or blouses.

No. 2 is excellent for tailored and semi-dressy gowns, while No. 4 gives the new and popular bell-shaped sleeve, which is cool and comfortable.

It is used for gowns, kimono and separate waists.

The styles are good for cloth serge, taffeta, poplin, china silk, madras, gingham and linen.

The pattern is cut in three sizes, small, medium and large. No. 1 will require 2 yards of 24-inch material; No. 2, 1 1/2 yards of 27-inch; No. 3, 1 1/2 yards of 40-inch; No. 4, 1 1/2 yards of 32-inch for one pair of sleeves in either size.

No. 1322—Girls' Dress With or Without Yoke Trimming.

This attractive style is very well suited to combinations of materials. As here shown, dotted crepe and plain crepe in a pretty shade of rose and white are combined.

The dress has many good points and may be made in several styles.

It may be without the yoke trim, with long or short sleeves, and also with or without the yoke trimming.

In elaborate and embroidered styles will be nice, and for general wear gingham, lawn, galatea, voile and poplin, seersucker and percale are very desirable.

The pattern is cut in four sizes—6, 8, 10 and 12 years. It requires 3 1/2 yards of 44-inch material for a 12-year size.

No. 1292—Ladies' Waist with Chemise.

Exceedingly attractive in this pretty style, with comfortable fullness over the fronts and its unique shaming at the closing.

As here shown, brown voile dotted in green was used, with pipings of green.

The dress is made of very fine fabric could be replaced by one of tulle or lace. The sleeve in wrist length has the popular drape finish.

In short length the turnback cuff is equally neat and pleasing.

The pattern is cut in six sizes—34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. It requires 4 1/2 yards of 44-inch material for a 42-inch size.

No. 1313—A Charming Waist Model.

As here shown, brocade was used for the bodice, with poplin for the waist and lining.

The pattern is cut in six sizes—34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. It requires 4 1/2 yards of 44-inch material for a 42-inch size.

No. 1296—Ladies' Two Piece Circular Skirt.

The style shows new skirt lines and is made of cloth and serge.

The skirt may be made in rayon, silk, tulle, and 12 inches.

Lady Duff-Gordon Describes Their Use On and Off Stage, and Gives an Expert's Advice Upon the Proper Dressing of Actresses

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, presenting all that is newest and best in styles for well-dressed Lady Duff-Gordon's Paris establishment brings her into close touch with that centre of fashion.

Lady Duff-Gordon's American establishment is at Nos. 37 and 39 West Fifty-seventh street, New York.

By Lady Duff-Gordon

JUST a little talk upon feathers, especially the new feathers and the feathers as they ought to be used off the stage and on.

Ever since I first seriously started in business, some eighteen years ago, in London, it has been my privilege to dress practically all of George Edwards' gorgeous productions, and he has had such faith in me that I have sometimes been consulted as to lighting and scenes and the making up of the girls' faces as well as their hairdressing. There are two entirely different kinds of stage dressing, both in their way equally attractive to an artist, though I think myself I prefer a musical comedy with peculiar and eccentric effects more than the drama, in which so many characters are tied down to a more sober and everyday type of people.

In musical comedy one can make the most wonderful general scheme of color, in which the "it" is just dotted by the principle appearing in the finishing touch to the color scheme which may be in turn either demure or eccentric as the play calls for. I shall never forget the pleasure that I myself got on the first appearance of Miss Lily Elsie in the "Count of Luxembourg," when the whole scheme was completed by the cloak and astonishing hat she wore—one of the first of its type, since made popular in this country by Gaby Deslys—it having an enormous fan shape and a tulle of sapphire blue.

Feathers have always played a most important part in fashions on the stage—possibly because they naturally have the most beautiful lines and are splendid mediums for introducing height as well as color. And it is really extraordinary to see the number of things that now replace the almost forgotten paradise and aigrette. I have three hats here, each in itself extraordinary. Two only appear on the stage or restaurant, while the last reminds one of a weathercock more than anything else. It is formed of peacock wing feathers that are stripped almost to the end and joined in the middle by a couple of hoops formed from the stripings.

This was so amusing to me when I bought it that I placed it straight upon the black shape exactly as one sees the weathercock on the top of a tower, and anything more attractive than the lines it makes when the wearer turns her head cannot be thought of. Her dress is of black woolback satin, made with an apron with bib straps. Over and under dress of black and white striped taffeta, with a muslin collar in front. The high black satin "choker" is tied with a knot, the ends of which fall down the back. The coat, carried on the arm, is lined with the same material as the underdress, with a couple of lines of bright green satin to give it a touch of color.

A real theatre gown is composed of white satin and draped through a belt of gold tulle and emerald green. The large scarf of green net is embroidered all over in a lace design in bright gold. The train is of white satin lined with green, while a separate train matching the underdress is of Persian blue chiffon.

This dress is made entirely for movement, as the draperies show every line of the body in whichever position the wearer may be. The upstanding feather of blue shaded to green springing from the band of violet is essentially for the stage, and gold slippers with green heels complete the costume.

A little dancing frock of pale gray satin is short and rather Victorian in shape, with a full skirt and little balances of silver lace caught at different points with small bouquets of silver flowers and green leaves. A girle of green and white chick encircles the waist, while the hat is composed of silver net on green silk wires, with two enormous golden pheasant feathers perched on the crown.

My model making in America necessitated me opening a separate studio from my exclusive Fifty-seventh street house, and such a full success has it been that it is now necessary for me to retain this as a theatrical as well as a model making department. Here, down on Fifth Avenue, I spend many delightful hours in decorating your most beautiful American actresses. It is a work I love—just as much as I do dressing those who are not on the stage.

One of the Enormous New Feathers Used Mostly for the Stage. The Gown is a Little Dancing Dress. The Feathers Are from the Golden Pheasant. ("Lucile" Model).

Theatre Gown of White Satin and Green. "Volcano" Feather of Blue Shaded to Green. ("Lucile" Model).

"Weathercock" Hat of Peacock Feathers Stripped to the Ends. The Dress is of Black Woolback Satin, with Apron and Bib Straps. High Black Satin "Choker." ("Lucile" Model).

OUR SAFETY DEPENDS UPON THE NAVY

PAUL JONES
1779

GEORGE DEWEY
1898

Still ready and able to fight

This Country Has Always Had the Men. It Ought to Have the Ships

THE American who does not think of his nation's navy and use its influence for it, is not intelligent. The great naval demonstration in New York City, showing the country's ships, AND THE COUNTRY'S LACK OF SHIPS, should arouse thought in every serious, patriotic man. He is feeble-minded who has not learned the lessons that the frightful war in Europe is teaching every day.

There should be no discussion in this country as to the need of a great navy, only earnest watchfulness of events and determination that war shall not find us helpless as it has found others. Look at Germany, harassed, isolated, in spite of her marvellous army, excelling all others, her desperate courage, energy and organization.

She had a navy—better than ours by far. With all speed and at great expense she was training every man to make the navy bigger, adequate. But she still fell short at the critical time. In submarines she has done wonders. A few lone German ships on the sea have accomplished feats that recall achievements of the greatest seamen.

But, GERMANY WAS INFERIOR TO ENGLAND.

The navy that England possessed gave her command of the seas; command of the seas to her as to us means peace of mind, the really important peace.

To-day not a German battleship is afloat outside the protecting harbors and the lines of German mines.

Not a German merchant vessel is carrying the trade, the manufactures of Germany.

That great commercial nation, built up so marvellously on the foundation of Bismarck's genius and Emperor William's terrible energy, is, for the time, dead industrially, dead commercially, and in the midst of a desperate fight for life—SIMPLY BECAUSE WHEN THE TIME CAME ENGLAND HAD CONTROL OF THE OCEANS, THE NECESSARY SHIPS.

Germany had wonderful merchantmen; her great passenger and freight ships were marvels of accomplishment. They lie, now, idle at their wharves at home, or protected here in our ports by our neutrality. They cannot move, for England had the fighting ships already.

French commerce goes on because France is the ally not so much of England as of the biggest, most powerful navy in the world. The great nations live on world-wide trade. The ocean is to the world's trade what the railroad is to inland trade. Control of the sea is control of the world's commerce.

A weak navy means weakness all over the earth's surface. Every American, every Congressman, every man responsible to the people for their safety, should appreciate the fact.

Why is this country now safe, sending its products where it will (except where England forbids)?

We are safe because we happen to be at peace with England. We can sell our goods abroad, and bring in the hundreds of millions—BECAUSE ENGLAND'S FLEET SAYS THAT WE MAY.

We have peace now, it happens that we are not mixed in this quarrel.

But suppose that we had been forced to take a side, forced by our own interests or by human decency?

And suppose that side had been against England?

We should now be bottled up at home just as Germany is bottled up, and more securely.

For the Germans have shown a power in the use of submarines; a desperate energy in finding outlets for their products that amazes the whole world, and that, unprepared, we could not equal. If we had trouble with the world's greatest fleet, we should be at home shut in, waiting for attack, wondering when it would come along our thousands of miles of coast, sitting as a man sits within his house waiting to be shot at through the window.

A few months ago men might say that wars were over, that civilized nations would no longer fight in the old way. That is said no longer. There is no question except as to the best means of employing and using what we are learning from Europe now.

England teaches us the need of the great fleet, the command of the open sea.

Germany, with extraordinary genius and courage, teaches us the power of the submarine; the wonders that can be done already with the invisible ship; the greater accomplishment to come.

The greatest experts in our nation should be studying for us the problems of submarine building. The United States should not be DISCUSSING submarines, but feverishly and energetically BUILDING THEM.

What would the nations of Europe not give could they have had the warning that we are getting now?

How many submarines would England now have ready if she could have foreseen what the submarine would do?

WE GET THE LESSON FREE, WITHOUT LOSS OF BLOOD OR MONEY. WHAT ARE WE DOING? NOTHING.

Our public men are solemnly discussing the question as to whether or not we are prepared. Such childlike hesitations are as criminal as it is foolish. Many of the citizens do not realize that the anxiety of Germany to-day may be our anxiety to-morrow.

We have to the east an intelligent nation that has proved its power to learn from Europe. You may be sure that the Japanese to-day are learning from Germany and learning from England, and applying the lessons.

They have learned that the big vessels moving on the water, keeping open the wide expanses of the sea, are still necessary. They have learned that the hidden ships, attacking unseen, are the coming power; they are not merely looking at them, they are AT WORK.

What do you suppose they would be doing IF THEY HAD THE UNLIMITED WEALTH AND POWER OF THE UNITED STATES?

Many other Americans talk as though the question of the value to us of a great navy were still an open question in this country. They forget the words of our great sea strategist, Mahan published by the Scientific American:

"It may safely be claimed that to the navy of the United States chiefly is owing the present Union, instead of the existence of two rival nations vying, or trying to vie, with each other in military preparations, like the nations of Europe. The four years' struggle of the Confederates might not have ended in exhaustion had it not been for the blockade, which shut in their cotton and shut out their supplies."

The height of a great nation's power is shown in the efficiency of the navy and national pride in the navy. A nation begins to die, as history shows, when the navy begins to wither.

Spain's greatness ended with her navy. Holland harassed England until the Dutch were swept from the sea.

Thomisties rendered the greatest of all services to the Greeks and established the power of Athens when he made his fellow citizens realize, with difficulty and in the face of base ingratitude, that their safety was on the water.

"Thus, as Plato says, from Athens it was he turned them into warriors and civilized them as the sea. . . . These men were carried to the Assembly without the opposition, as Strabo relates, of Melian."

" . . . that the deliverance of Greece came at that time from the sea, and that the quellen restored Athens after it was destroyed, were others war. . . . Very . . . it would be sufficient to show, also, that his land forces were still entire after his defeat at sea, fled away and thought himself a loser, . . . to encourage the Greeks." [Plutarch.]

We are a gigantic nation, with the moral duty to defend the independence established in Cuba with patriotic responsibility for the Philippines, and responsibility for the thousands upon thousands of miles of unprotected coast on the Atlantic and the Pacific.

We know too well the attitude of various nations toward us, including Japan, a powerful fighting island nation like England, appreciating her navy.

We are a nation that is to be strong is TO BE FREE FROM ATTACK.

That which is powerful is let alone. Ships do not fire their guns at Gibraltar.

True, we cannot build twenty thousand miles of barrier along our coast. But we can build the best submarines and forts to make those who would attempt to land an invading force upon them.

We don't want war, we want no pugnacious. But we do want SAFETY. And we can have it if we WILL.

We have the money, we have the men, as we have always had them. Paul Jones was no better than Dewey, who still lives. Nelson was no greater in his fighting day than would be dozens of American sea fighters if we gave them the chance, the education and the ships.

These things we need, and must have.

A navy so great as to make attack preposterous, a fighting navy, plenty of battleships until the submarine shall have been perfected to the point of making them useless, cruisers, submarines, torpedo boats, destroyers.

These should protect, and be reinforced by a small commercial navy, OWNED BY THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES.

This country's trade should go in American ships owned by the American Government, operated for the benefit of American farmers and manufacturers, at the bare cost of interest on United States credit, and upkeep.

Every great freight carrying steamship should have, ON SHORE, READY FOR USE THE BIG GUN GUNS THAT SHE COULD CARRY.

Every fast passenger and express ship on lakes, rivers and along the coast should have its torpedo tubes.

The people of the United States should be able to say to the rest of the world: "We have a fighting navy that is a model, it alone could take care of you."

We have great commercial ships of the highest power, owned by the people of the United States, managed for use, not for profit.

Of these powerful ships we have hundreds, thousands, we do all our own carrying. Each ship has its guns, left ashore in time of peace.

We have in the service of the people the fastest boats afloat, the greatest fleet of air craft. These are powerful ships, except our professional warships.

But every ship that the people own could be made a warship to-morrow, just as every rifle the citizens owned in 1776 could be used to shoot redcoats on short notice.

We don't WANT war, therefore we have arranged matters SO THAT YOU WILL LEAVE US ALONE, BEING AFRAID TO PROVOKE US.

Is the country to wait, and be found unprepared as it was in the miserable, ridiculous war with Spain, which fortunately for us, called for no more than a short notice?

Are we to see the day when we shall be buying old tubs, and private yachts at ridiculous prices, when we shall be cut off from the world, humiliated in our own eyes, and in the eyes of history?

Shall we be described properly as a nation of storekeepers and manufacturers only, eager to sell, unwilling to spend or defend ourselves, ready to take a beating, rather than realize the truth in advance and get ready for it?

Let our citizens and public officials study the wisdom of England. First, she knew enough to create the greatest navy, bigger in power than any two other navies of the world.

Second, she knew what her navy was coming CLOSE TO THE HORN PORT, AND SHE PREPARED FOR THE DISTANT POINTS BY AN ALLIANCE WITH JAPAN THE OTHER GREAT ISLAND NATION WITH AN EFFICIENT NAVY.

She was ready to deal with the navy at home, with her own ships, and in the great sea power, realizing that the navy of the ocean must be dealt with by the navy of the ocean.

We have no navy, and we are not as many friends as certain of our officials believe.

The man who says that the navy is he who needs neither friend nor ally.

The only allies we need are the national wealth, and the nation's influence. We have them. WE OUGHT TO USE THEM.

A great navy is a fighting and for the training of the navy, the fleet battleship, with a fleet of submarines, and the other vessels, and the fleet. That should be the object of the navy.

Then, the navy should be owned by the people. The navy should be owned by the people. The navy should be owned by the people. The navy should be owned by the people.

Every great passenger and express ship on lakes, rivers and along the coast should have its torpedo tubes.

The people of the United States should be able to say to the rest of the world: "We have a fighting navy that is a model, it alone could take care of you."

We have great commercial ships of the highest power, owned by the people of the United States, managed for use, not for profit.

that is necessary. It is a partnership, but a marriage bond, and when finances are poor," said the Emperor, "it is necessary to be economical." Englishmen have never seen a Russian as excepting those that saw him pass in a carriage through England on that famous journey of 1871. He was then a young man, but, with our knowledge of the tranquil and unalterable character of alliances we may be sure that he has not changed. "You are attached, gentlemen which we may soon have to unlearn or even to detach," said the real friend of these exhortations to "have no prejudices," "I am attached to my country, no pre-construption, no special sympathies," "I am Jewish sufficient, to show that though Russia is a Christian country, it is not a country of ready money, and that her potentialities lie in the hands of the British, never are to be calculated." With a globe and an hour the Czar has been able to show that he has a continuous empire to the world and one of the "least explored" (one may easily find money to be made in the least explored) "the world and the more already Russia pays interest and the dividends, the more will she be loved." The total value of a navy may be summed up in the value of one battleship, which gives a conquering preponderance in gun-fire sufficient prowess to enable us to reach the Canal at all times, and under all conditions. It is indispensable that we maintain con-

"The War College considers that every effort of the fleet, and every effort of the Department in connection with the fleet, should have for its sole aim the war efficiency of the fleet. Every effort which does not directly contribute to this end is in itself a wasteful expenditure of energy, and so far as it is a diversion from his duty, it is a crime.

Among all those who have occupied positions of trust and power, and whose business it has been to recognize and provide for our naval and military needs, it is remarkable how few have had the necessary breadth of view to grasp the fact that the only way to insure our requirements without making silly and costly mistakes, like that of the construction of our first three battleships, the Oregon, the Massachusetts and the Indiana, merely for coast defense, was to build ships that could be employed for service in distant waters. Then, when the war with Spain came, we held our breath while the Oregon rounded the Horn.

Think of the United States of America being so backward in her naval armaments as to have national boats on the old Oregon. A single shell from one of the huge guns of an up-to-date British super-dreadnought has a striking force equal to the energy required to lift the old battleship Oregon bodily to a height of more than 100 feet.

We have, at enormous expense, cut a great waterway through the Isthmus and established a short route between the Atlantic and the Pacific, and yet we have neglected the needs of the nations of the world and yet it. We gratuitously build it for the world's welfare. It will, however, be valuable in time of war for the safe passage of our warships; in fact, it will be a great advantage to us in the event of a war for that purpose will be entirely dependent upon the ability of our Navy to keep the sea clear of an enemy's ships at either end.

The war with Spain was very due, it is a well known fact that the United States had the command of the American seas is absolutely true to us. Immediately following the Spanish War, we rapidly built up our Navy, until it became second only to that of England. But we have neglected to keep it up to date. The United States Navy occupies third place, with a 1,400-ton ship soon dropping down to fifth place.

In 1905, England ended the great modern dreadnought, which was as much of a revolution as the sailing ship was to the galley. The United States Navy has not followed the lead of the British. The first ship of the new type, the USS Oregon, was not ordered until 1908, and it was not until 1910 that the USS Oregon was ordered.

of its time. The dreadnought relegated all existing battleships to the second line weeks, land upon our shores an army of from 100,000 to 200,000 men. Here, the greatest

The dreadnought was so much superior in size, in speed, in gun-dre, and in all defensive and offensive qualities, that it took its place at once as the indispensable first-line battleship. England, Germany, France, Japan, each recognizing the tremendous superiority of the dreadnought, enlarged their naval appropriations and built dreadnoughts.

As the Scientific American has just stated on our coast fortifications should not be so named, instead, they should be designated as city-batteries.

It would be quite impracticable adequately to cover our long stretch of seaboard by means of a few batteries, and the few batteries that we have, which are so named, are so situated that they can effectively serve as anti-batteries. It is absolutely indispensable that we have a fleet of powerful gunboats sufficiently powerful to defend our whole coast.

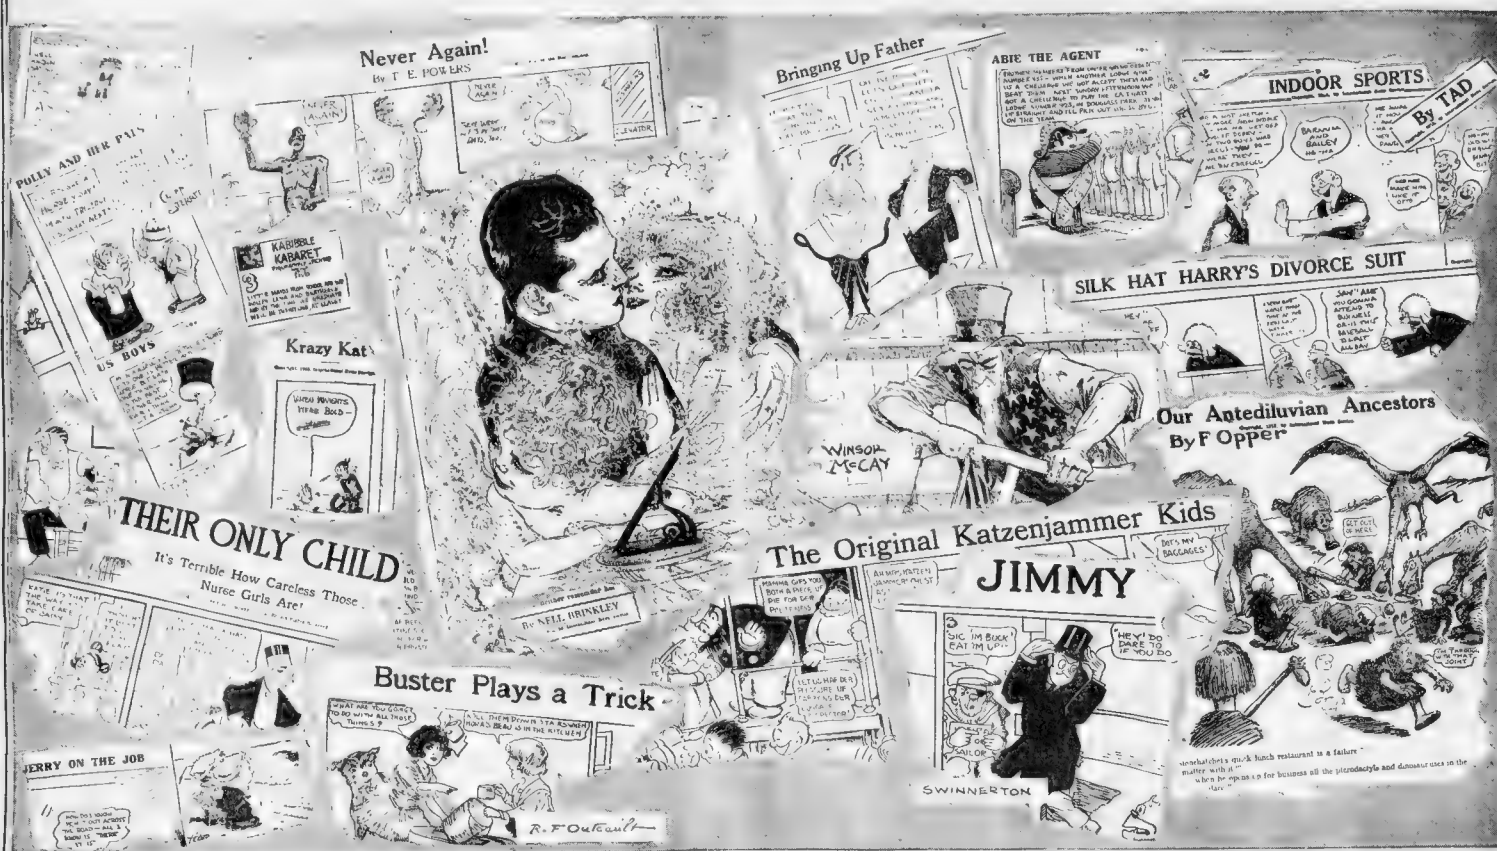

weeks, land upon our shores an army of from 100,000 to 200,000 men. Here, the question arises, how can we defend our shores? We can get past our coast fortifications? We spent about $180,000,000 on our coast fortifications, but they were never intended for the protection of our entire coast line. They were intended to protect our great cities, cities and harbors and naval bases. They actually protect but a very small fraction of our many thousand miles of shore.

How can we defend our entire coast line? Our coast fortifications should not be so named. Instead, they should be designated as city-and-harbor fortifications.

How can we protect our entire coast line? We can defend our long stretch of seaboard by means of coast fortifications. The only coast fortifications that can effectively serve us at all are those that are situated in the water. We are integrity as a nation that we have a sufficiently powerful to defend our whole coast.

WHY THE BOSTON AMERICAN LEADS IN CIRCULATION

REASON NUMBER FIVE—Because It Is First in Illustrations, First in Cartoons, and First in Good Humor.

Some of the Famous Artists and Cartoonists Whose Pictures Appear in the Boston American:

Among the artists and cartoonists whose work has placed the BOSTON AMERICAN so far beyond any attempts at competition may be mentioned the following:

CHARLES DANA GIBSON, creator of "The Gibson Girl," whose drawings are to be found decorating the pages of the AMERICAN Sunday Monthly Magazine, the highest class magazine printed on this paper, which is given free with the issue of the Boston Sunday AMERICAN which bears the date of the first Sunday in each month.

HARRISON FISHER, famous for his work in color, creator of the series "The Six Senses" which have formed the front cover designs of recent issues of the AMERICAN'S Sunday Monthly Magazine supplement.

A. B. WENZELL, an artist of international reputation whose illustrations for the great Jack London serial story, "The Star Rover," form one of the attractive features of the Sunday AMERICAN'S Monthly Magazine supplement.

HOWARD CHANDLER CHRISTY, whose drawings are found regularly in the Sunday AMERICAN'S Monthly Magazine supplement.

WINSON MCCAY, one of the most powerful cartoonists of his generation, with an unusual command of perspective.

NELL BRINKLEY, whose attractive and delicate drawings have created a wide vogue for her work that is possessed by any other American artist of her time.

T. E. POWERS, who never drew an uninteresting line.

F. B. OPPER, famous for "Alphonse and Gaston," "Happy Hootigan" and his political cartoons.

JAMES SWINNERTON, creator of "Jimmy," "Mr. Jack" and other comic series famous the world over.

R. F. OUTCAULT, creator of "Buster Brown," whose work is so popular with children as well as grown-ups.

HEINRICH ROTH, famous abroad as "The American Helieu," whose etchings of leaders of the most exclusive circles of Boston society, specially posed, form one of the regular features of the society section of the Sunday AMERICAN.

WILLIAM STEVENS, the Sunday AMERICAN'S staff futurist artist, whose black and white work is second to none in his line in America.

GEORGE McMANUS, whose "Bringing Up Father" sketches in the AMERICAN are appreciated by old and young.

Six Reasons Why the BOSTON AMERICAN Leads in Circulation

- 1—Scrupulous cleanliness—the BOSTON AMERICAN is strictly a HOME paper.
- 2—Best war correspondents—leads in war news and photographs.
- 3—Most enterprising news service from all over the globe.

- 4—Most brilliant and able staff of contributors and the greatest writers.
- 5—First in illustrations, first in cartoons and first in good humor.
- 6—Unswerving devotion to the interests of the people.

Thus a few minutes later Inex entered the secret den of Wu Fang.

"Ah—this is the young woman introduced Wu to Long Sin.

Long Sin looked her over critically and nodded approval while Wu with an American tape measure carefully measured Inex, talking now in English to her, now in Chinese to Long Sin.

Carefully planning each detail down to the smallest possibility of error, Wu Fang and Long Sin completed their arrangements and, finally, with Inex left the apartment. On the street an automobile was waiting at the curb, while not far away two toughs from the neighborhood stood.

They climbed into the car and the five criminals whirled rapidly up town.

Kennedy had often been amused at my never having a match when I needed it, and it had occurred to him to devise a very novel cigar

It was simple enough, consisting of a small battery connected by small wires to one of a pair of cuff links. One link had in its face a very fine wire, only a fraction of an inch long. To the link Craig had soldered the wires from the battery and arranged them so that they ran up under his coat sleeve through the arm hole of his vest to the battery, which he carried in his vest pocket.

He had just completed his work when he heard me coming and hastily drew on his coat. "Well, what's new?" I greeted.

"Nothing in particular," he replied. "Have a cigarette?"

He handed his cigarette case to me and I took one. Then, unsuspecting, I began to

A black and white photograph showing a woman in a light-colored, possibly white, dress and a matching hat. She is seated at a desk, looking up towards a man who is leaning over her from the right. The man is wearing a dark suit and a bowler hat. On the desk to the left, there is a desk lamp with a glass chimney and a metal base. The background is dark and indistinct. The entire photograph is framed by a thin white border.

"Are You All Right?" Gasps Craig, Stooping Over Elaine as She Leans Back in His Arms.

"I thought it might amuse you," he smiled, explaining the arrangement as he opened his vest and exposed a set of bare wires, the electric connection by a mere pressure of his arm.

Natural evil was a reflection of the reality of the thing.

Flaine was not a very big girl, but in the library when, not a day after Mao's car was out of the mass of streets of a blindfold, she stepped a few blocks below the living house. With long hair, Wu got out a small bag of fruit.

When the car was back at the house, he directed her to go to the kitchen. Inside the car, she said, "You can come to catch up with her directly in front of the house. After that, a car will just blow around

U FANX sat at a table in his apartment and hidden behind the squalid and balding ceiling of a Chinatown tenement, he watched the street below. On a small table in front of him stood a bottle, which contained several sticks of phosphorus immersed in water, and a small canary glass tube.

For the moment, however, he had laid aside the stick of paraffinapherna and was writing a note. As he finished he tapped a bell and silently a Chinese servant appeared in answer.

"Take the water," he said, handing him the bottle.

"Yes, sir," adding, "Give it to her yourself—and if she is there, return with her."

The servant bowed and Wu returned to work at his desk, dictating to his Chinese scribe.

He had completed his labors when his trusted lieutenant, Long Sin, entered.

"For what did the master summon me?" asked Long Sin, doffing his hat.

"Come here," beckoned Wu. "Behold this!"

With the pair of tweezers he seized a small stick of the phosphorus under the water and slowly raised it. The phosphorus glowed with a brilliant orange light, and Wu pointed to the dangerous element burst into flame, giving off a dense white smoke.

"Here I have a capillary tube, as the white devil Long Sin said, 'the science,' wait on Wu pointing out the glass tube." By carefully bending it and arranging the outlet of the water I can set a fire anywhere at any time.

For a moment he let the water drip slowly, drop by drop, to show how he could commit scientific arson by means of spontaneous combustion.

Even while he was showing the devilish invention to Long Sin, his servant had sought the elaborately furnished apartment of the white woman to whom the note had been addressed.

She was an attractive young woman, known in the demi-monde as Innocent Inez. Except for a certain coarseness, she strongly resembled Elaine, both in features and figure. But one had only to see her reclining voluptuously on a couch, smoking a cigarette and reading a risqué novel, to realize that the resemblance went no further.

"Wait," she said with a sudden accession of energy, nodding at the same time to her negro maid to bring her hat and coat. "I will go with you."

A Story for Mother's Day

REPRODUCTIONS FROM THE FILMS OF THE PHOTO PLAY FOUND ON ELLA WHEELER WILCOX'S GREAT POEM ON THE DUTIES OF MOTHERHOOD. Grace's posings before the mirror were very cute when she was a little girl, but as she grew up the graceful habit led to vanity and a frivolous character.

In the family circle Frank and Grace received all the pettings. Hector was a little brother who was a bit of a mischief maker.

Sermon in Poetry by Ella Wheeler Wilcox Reproduced in a Photo-Play

Today is Mother's Day.

And out in Medford is being enacted for the pettation on the film of a moving picture, a great sermon on the duties of motherhood as first preached by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, the famous authoress, in a poem. The photo-play, from which the pictures on this page are taken, is being produced under the direction of Richard Garfield of the Humantology Film-Producing Company.

The poem by Miss Wilcox is "Lord, Speak Again," and concerns the life story of a mother to watch over and guide the two, that is, fictions of her children, just as they grow they come under the influence of others, and ended by their own desires and whims and stray from the desired path.

In the play a mother is portrayed as having just finished reading the poem. She looks at her four children grown up. She sees the prodigal favoring Grace, the most loved, and for two daughters, and neglecting Alice, the girl, who really needs most of a mother's care, and of her tendency to give health.

The mother sees the favorite daughter Grace posing before the mirror, prinking, even as in childhood, so entirely under the approving eye of the mother, but as she grows older the graceful habit inspires vanity and the daughter becomes a little too much a pampered woman without sense of responsibility, vain and self-seeking. She acquires undesirable habits while a member of a bohemian set. Her mother is an artist ends in humiliation and disgrace for the girl.

Thoughts of another kind run through the mind of the things which the mother has failed to tell. The family physician warns the mother of the rapidly failing health of her other daughter, Alice. But the warning comes too late.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

In the dream the two sons, Hector and Frank, and a girl, Alice, in childhood, develop distinct characters because of the same partiality of her mother. Hector is the son of the house for Hector.

As a boy Hector was ruled with a firm hand. His mother devised as to amuse him, and later in life he became a man of hard and stern determination.

Frank, the youngest, led Frank seeks his pleasure among young gamblers. He becomes attached to this game because of the money which he finds with these youths. He loses his money and the gaming board strips him of his money.

Frank is killed in a row over cards. Hector, the eldest, sweeps the mother back into the life of her loved ones. She looks after her children, playing games with them, and with their innocent joys and sorrows.

The separation between the childhood and manhood of the children fills her with fear, she is afraid of the future.

She starts up and rubs her eyes. She rushes to the bedside and finds the mother dead. She thrills for a moment, but then she discovers that the mother is still happy at their side. The mother's face is still smiling. The mother's face is still smiling.

The poem of this drama is as follows:

Lord, Speak Again

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

When God had formed the Universe, He thought
Of all the marvels therein to be wrought
And to His aid then Motherhood was brought.

"My lesser self, the feminine of Me,
She will go forth throughout all time," quoth He.
"And make My world what I would have it be."

"For I am weary, having labored so,
And for a cycle of repose would go Into that silence which but God may know."

"Therefore I leave the rounding of My plan
To Motherhood; and that which I began
Let woman finish in perfecting man."

"She is the soil; the human Mother Earth;
She is the sun, that calls the seed to earth.
She is the gardener, who knows its worth."

"From Me all seed of any kind must spring.
Divine the growth such seed and soil will bring.
For all is Me, and I am everything."

Thus having spoken to Himself aloud,
His glorious face upon His breast He bowed,
And sought repose behind a wall of cloud.

Come forth, O God! though great Thy thoughts and good,
In shaping woman for true Motherhood,
Lord, speak again; she has not understood.

The centuries pass; the cycles roll along—
The earth is peopled with a mighty throng.
Yet men are fighting and the world goes wrong.

Lord, speak again, ere yet it be too late,
Unloved, unwanted souls come through earth's gate;
The unborn child is given a dower of hate.

Thy world progresses in all ways save one,
In Motherhood, for which it was begun.
Lord, behold how little has been done!

Children are spawned like fishes in the sand,
With ignorance and crime they fill the land.
Lord, speak again, till mothers understand.

It is not all of Motherhood to know
Conception pleasure or deliverance woe.
Who plants the seeds should help the shoots to grow.

Better a barren soil than weed and tare,
Or sickly plants that die for want of care
In poisonous jungles, void of sun and air.

True Motherhood is not alone to breed
The human race; it is to know and heed
Its holiest purpose and its highest need.

Lord, speak again, so woman shall be stirred
With the full meaning of the mighty word
True Motherhood. She has not rightly heard.

Grace's frivolous nature and love of pleasure drew her into the Bohemian crowd of the studios where the comradeship between the men and women members of this set were a little startling to her at first.

Grace became one of the inner crowd. She was tolerated and induced to take a first glass of liquor. She was praised as the prettiest woman in the set.

Grace became hardened and was scornful when exposed by her brother Frank, who had learned the sort of life his sister is pursuing.

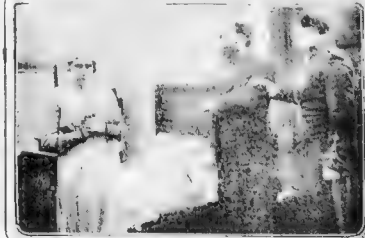

Grace is led to see the error of her ways through the advice and kindly counsel of a sister of Mercy.

THE "FIGHTING NINTH" REGIMENT CELEBRATES

Organization Which Won Fame in Civil and Spanish Wars to Observe 54th Anniversary

Ninth Regiment, famous in two wars, on parade. The organization is to hold a notable celebration at Worcester on June 11, marking the fifty-fourth anniversary of the mustering in of the regiment into the United States service in the Civil War.

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

The Ninth Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, is to have a regimental assembly in the city of Worcester on Saturday, June 11. On that day the entire strength of the famous regiment will march through the streets of Worcester and afterwards take part in the field-day to be held on the spacious parade ground in the northern suburbs of the city.

All twelve companies of the regiment will march behind their commander, Colonel Edward L. Logan, who is also judge of the South Boston Court.

Pending with the regiment will be the respective honor corps of citizens of Boston and Worcester. The Boston Ninth Regiment Association, an chief escort, will be led by Lieutenant James J. Phelan, the banner.

With them as their guests for the day will also march, as escort the officers of the Sixty-Ninth Regiment, New York National Guard. The companies of the Ninth to muster in Worcester on that day are:

Companies A, B, C, D, E, H, I of Boston
Company M of Lowell
Company P of Lawrence
Company K of Clinton
Company I of Woburn
Company G of Worcester

NOTABLE ANNIVERSARY.

The occasion of the regimental assembly is the fifty-fourth anniversary of the mustering in of the Ninth into the service of the United States for the Civil War.

May State patriotic sentiment and fervor will find vent in Worcester on that day. And from the spirit of the day, it is not at all improbable that the afternoon of the muster will be a general holiday in the city of Worcester.

The story of the Ninth Regiment is a story of valor and patriotic duty in which all citizens of Massachusetts take hearty pride. But the regiment is especially the pride of the great population of Massachusetts which is of the Irish race.

The regiment was recruited in April, 1861. It was organized May 11, 1861. It was mustered into the service of the nation on June 15, 1861. It was mustered out of service in 1864, when the war for the Union was over.

Although the Ninth as a regiment was recruited in 1861, the story history began many years earlier. In 1811 the Columbian Artillery in Boston had for its commander, Captain Thomas Case. Every man in the command was of Irish birth and in religion a Catholic. Under his leadership the "Columbian" attained excellent soldierly development and a discipline of the highest standard.

The command had reached the level of one of the best drilled military organizations of the State when its existence was suddenly ended through the action in January, 1812, of Governor Henry J. Gardner, the "Know-Nothing Governor," who, in his inaugural address to the Legislature, declared his intention "to disband all military companies composed of persons of foreign birth."

LET GOVERNMENT BE WISE.

Four days after this announcement of Governor Gardner, his Excellency received the following communication:

Headquarters of Co. M Fifth Regiment of Artillery, First Brigade and First Division, January 3, 1812.

To His Excellency, Henry J. Gardner, Commander-in-Chief: Sir—In consequence of what we consider to be a gross insult to the members of Company M, Fifth Regiment of Artillery, and others now in the service of the Government, in paragraph marked No. 8 of your address to the Legislature, we have the honor to inform you that we have decided to resign our commissions. This letter is respectfully submitted to you, and we have the honor to inform you that we have decided to resign our commissions.

THOMAS CASE, Captain of Company M, Fifth Regiment of Artillery.

RECEIVED BY THE SPIRIT OF THE REGIMENT. The letter of the company resigned their commissions. This happened the organization. It did not, however, pass out of existence. It was immediately formed into a club body under the name of the Columbian Association.

CRISPIN L. LAYMAN, the able historian of the Ninth Regiment, writes of this episode in Massachusetts politics.

All right-minded Christians must admit that the secret of the military success which from time to time has been the lot of the Irish is a curse to the Republic, and not that any and all there in Ireland are blood-thirsty. But they are all by such a high official as the Governor of the State, all good citizens must tremble for the results. In General Grant's memoirs, vol. 21, p. 1, he says among other things, "But all secret, oath-bound, political parties are dangerous to any nation, no matter how pure or how patriotic the motives and principles which first bring them together. No political party can be ought to exist when one of its corner stones is opposition to the doctrine of one's own conscience or according to the creed of any religious denomination whatever."

President Lincoln, writing on the same subject, says "I am not a Know-Nothing, that is certain, how could I be?—When our Constitution will read 'All men are created equal except foreigners—and Catholics.' When it comes to this I shall prefer where they make no pretense of being free—Russia, for instance, where despotism can be taken pure and without the baseness of hypocrisy."

"ABRAHAM LINCOLN." Governor Lincoln's protective action was not allowed to chill the patriotic sentiment of Captain Case and his associates. The flag of the United States was quickly proved on the day the flag of the United States was taken pure and without the baseness of hypocrisy.

President Lincoln sent our call for men to save the Union. In answer to that call "Irishmen" were held in Boston to raise a regiment in answer to that call "Irishmen" were held in Boston to raise a regiment.

Governor Andrew—an entirely different man from Gardner—gave the best of his support to the "Irishmen" who were held in Boston to raise a regiment.

rapidly did the recruiting for the regiment proceed that in a short time ten companies were mustered in Boston. In quick succession the companies of the Ninth were formed. The companies of the Ninth were formed.

hour of summons from Washington to proceed to the front. When the call did come Colonel Case's command had reached a full strength of 1,044 officers and men.

The great day for the officers and men of the Ninth arrived when Colonel Case was ordered to report with his command in light marching order at the State House to receive the State flag and be reviewed by the Governor.

The regiment was brought up the harbor from Long Island on board the steamer "Nellie Baker." Colonel Case and his men marched ashore at Long Wharf where they were cheered to the echo by an enormous crowd, headed by Governor Hand and Mayor's Drum Corps.

Case gave the command, "Forward March!" and to the martial music of the drum corps the Regiment crossed the Long Island parade ground for the wharf and began its journey to the scene of action.

Three Government Transports, the San de Yord, the Cambridge and the Pembroke, conveyed the regiment down the coast and up the Chesapeake on its voyage to Washington.

From that hour onward to the end of the war, the Ninth Massachusetts carried its full duty for the Nation. The fortune and fate of war decreed that Colonel Case's career should be full of duty for the Nation.

Here we are, with only one more voting coupon in Series "C." Do the contestants in the American's great California Tours Contest realize how quickly the contest periods are slipping by?

Only fifty-five days more—and twenty-five candidates will have earned the right to a place on the American's DE LUXE Pullman train which will leave Boston on July 24 on wonderful journey to the Pacific Coast and back.

YOU WILL FIND, AS USUAL, THE BIG 10-VOTE COUPON IN THIS PAPER ON PAGE 2.

We want to say right here that any candidates who have slackened their vote-gathering efforts, waiting for the first published vote standing, are making a serious mistake. Each vote-gathering day that is permitted to pass without a substantial increase to candidates' vote total is a day wasted that can never come again.

Get out and hustle for the all-important vote coupons! Offer prizes to members of your clubs that get you the most votes. And promise them all an enjoyable time at some theatre! Get up a dancing party and let the admission price be vote coupons instead of money. If you follow these tactics, you will get more votes than you realize.

The greatest victory in life is the one that comes from the hardest toil—the fruits of your labor.

Everyone knows how the American does big things in a big way and the mere hints of the wonderful journey arranged for the twenty-five tour winners is as good as a guarantee and enough to make anyone "bubble with enthusiasm."

By steady effort, by consistent endeavor, any candidate can roll up a big vote total between now and the end of the struggle on July 3.

The truth is, there are dozens and dozens of people who would gladly purchase the American and give you their vote coupons if they were approached in the proper manner.

The fact that the American is appreciated where it is read speaks volumes for it. Pick out the person you think would like to read the best newspaper in Boston and put your proposition before him. You have the strongest talking point possible because you have the paper that does things.

It is a daily incident in the American office to hear new subscribers remark that they felt sorry because they had not taken the American long ago.

The field is there—it is up to you to reap the harvest—and whatever effort any candidate puts forth NOW will be repaid an hundred-fold if he or she is among the tour winners.

The important thing for every candidate to remember today is the absolute necessity for getting a flying start on Series "D," which begins Tuesday. There is ample time between now and Tuesday to round up dozens of new friends and acquaintances so that you can start with a rush on the new Series "D," and get the big double vote value offered for consecutive sets.

Every effort is being made at the contest headquarters to complete the counting, tabulating and checking of Series "A" and "B" votes in time for publication in next Sunday's American. It is not possible, at this time, to absolutely promise this, but nothing will be left undone to finish this huge work in time for publication Sunday.

In the meantime, candidates, forget all about everything except the daily grind for more and still more vote coupons to be piled up to your credit.

Final arrangements have been completed for the hundred and one details of the tour itinerary, and the American promises the twenty-five winning candidates a treat that will linger in their memories as long as life shall last.

Ray Conlin and His Funny Dummy, Terry, on the Stage

RAY—Say, Terry, last night a rat jumped out of my stove, and although I had my gun, I didn't shoot him, because he ran away.
TERRY—Well, what's the idea?
RAY—The idea? Why, that's the joke. He ran away.
TERRY—If you don't know how to tell a joke any better than that, you better out, and let me tell 'em. Now if I was telling that joke I'd say, although I had my gun with me, I didn't shoot him, because he got out of my range.
RAY—That's a better one.
TERRY—Yes, and they're sending all the good, healthy men to the European war, and letting fellows like you stay here.
RAY—How do you like this cigar I'm smoking, Terry? Two for a quarter.
TERRY—Yes, and twenty cents change.
RAY—I have a bad cold today.
TERRY—Yes, that's where I got it in the week. You stay out all night, and then I can't sleep.
RAY—What are you crying about?
TERRY—Oh, I've just got a little crying jag. I don't know the name of that last drink I took, but whatever it was, it was a success.
RAY—I wish we could do our telephone trick today, but the phone's broken.
TERRY—Broken? Well, it's got nothing on us.
RAY—Who are you in mourning, Terry?
TERRY—My father died last week. He was an actor, too. He opened the show at his theatre, and they walked in on him.
RAY—No, but what was the real cause of your father's death?
TERRY—Well, he had theatrical trouble. He was at a vaudeville show, and the troupe performer slipped and fell. She tore her dress, or something. She asked if there was some gentleman in the audience who could accommodate her with a safety pin. Well, father didn't have any, so he committed suicide.
RAY—You fooled me with that one, Terry.
TERRY—I know, you thought I was gonna say father was killed in the rush, but I'm different. I tell you all new ones.
RAY—Who was that you were walking in the park with the other night?
TERRY—That was my girl, baby. I never go walkin' in the park with anybody but my girl.
RAY—How's that?
TERRY—Because detectives tell nothing.
RAY—Why don't you ask her to marry you to the opposite side of the avenue?
TERRY—It's because he won't be out of the hospital till then.
RAY—Here, was master? That's not the right answer.
TERRY—I know, that's the answer to the next joke. You're too slow for me. I kiss you gotta keep at least one joke ahead of you.
RAY—That's not a very nice way to treat a good-looking fella like me.
TERRY—Don't do that! Say, nobody could love a man with a face like yours except his mother.
RAY—Now you're getting personal. I don't like it.
TERRY—Personal? Huh, I'm gettin' GOOD. That's what you don't like about me. You're afraid I'll put me over on you with you. You wanta look out for me a week, but I'm battin' three hundred right now.
RAY—Say, can you say the letter "M" without moving your lips?
TERRY—Sure. Here I go—
RAY—Oh, no. I snatched you. You moved 'em.
TERRY—Well, don't pull that string and I won't.
RAY—Terry, are you gonna marry Daisy?
TERRY—Nix, nix. I never go pedestrating that some word—pedestrating with a girl who'll get into convulsion felicity.
RAY—Now I want you to sing a song for me. Sing the Song of Songs.
TERRY—Hey, don't you tell me what to sing. I'll sing what and when I want. Who are you anyway? When I found you were only gettin' a dollar and a quarter a day and all you could steal. Now I'm payin' three dollars a week regular, and belt your friend. Now where do you get off? Don't tell me what to sing.
RAY—All right, I apologize.
TERRY—All right. Now I'll sing the Song of Songs, but remember I'm doing it because I want, that's all.

Professor Stiller could not conceal a faint smile. The whole activity of the moment was in his appearance and not in his words. The same thought after all, it was more than a duck's back is affected by a woman who had been too well brought up to look at a man of four years with too much grace to run from him and hide, as he had done, the fact that she did not want to look at her from the floor, and for her own sake. "Oh, how heavy she was!" she murmured a little and flinched a little when she thought her arms and chest and feet were without admiration the first act of the cause of her legs, and when she saw her eyes her mouth and looked in and murmured, "It was!" But when he asked why she should show him the pretty house in which she lived, she did so gladly, for it seemed to put an end to being teased.

For the immediate purpose Professor Stiller did not need to penetrate beyond the cheerful living room, for here his eyes at once attracted out from many three photographs, in which justice had pretty nearly been done, not only to his small companion, but to her famous father and her mother.

"What is that funny thing on the piano?" asked Professor Stiller. "The little girl looked in the direction indicated, and in a moment it was a Chinese 'opinion'." "It was the moment in which he had succeeded in directing her attention to the young man who slipped the three photographs in the crumpled leather frame into one of his pockets. He was not in the habit of being asked her if she would give him a kiss. This was a thing which, it seemed to her, she could neither accord nor refuse. She simply burst into tears. The Professor

The Eight Little Devils and the One Big Devil

A MAN was walking along the road and saw seven little devils hopping about on the roof of a little cottage. A little further on he saw one little devil perched against the chimney of a great big building. The lone little devil was asleep. And as he was looking, wondering, down the road came a great big devil rushing along like a red automobile.

"Hey!" the man yelled, "stop a minute, will you? I want to ask you something."

"Well, hurry up," the big devil said, "I haven't got much time."

"How is it that there are seven little devils on the roof of that little building and only one on the big one?"

"Oh," the big devil said, "that big building is a fashionable church. The preacher there doesn't believe in the divinity of Jesus Christ. He preaches that good books, clean living, and that sort of thing will take you to heaven. It only takes one devil to take care of that crowd and he can sleep on the job."

"But that little building is the home of a God-fearing man and his wife. I'm on my way now to stir up those seven little devils and see if something can't be done."

The Parable of the Angel and the Mother

ONCE read the story of an angel who stole out of heaven and came to this world one bright sunny day; roamed through the field, forest, hamlet and city, and as the sun went down plumed his wings for the return flight. The angel said: "Now, that my visit is over, before I return, I must gather some mementoes of my trip." He looked at the beautiful flowers in the garden and said: "How lovely and fragrant," and plucked the rarest roses, and made a bouquet and said: "I see nothing more beautiful and fragrant than these flowers."

The angel looked further and saw a bright-eyed, rosy-cheeked child and said: "That baby is prettier than the flowers; I will take that, too," and looking beyond to the cradle he saw a mother's love pouring out over her babe like a gushing spring, and the angel said: "The mother's love is the prettiest thing I've seen; I will take that, too."

And with these three treasures the heavenly messenger winged his flight to the pearly gates, saying: "Before I go in I must examine the mementoes of my trip to the earth. He looked at the flowers; they had withered. He looked at the baby's smile and it had faded. He looked at the mother's love, and it shone in all its pristine beauty."

Then he threw away the withered flowers, cast aside the faded smile, and with the mother's love pressed to his heart, swept through the gates into the city, shouting that the only thing that he had found that would retain its fragrance from earth to heaven is a mother's love.

When God gave you the office of mother it was almost the same as if He had given you His right hand.

A Parable for Political Grafters

DID you ever hear or read that story told by Count Tolstoy. He tells of a man to whom the government would give a piece of land as long as the distance he could traverse and re-traverse between the rising and setting of the sun. And as the sun came tripping over the banks, the signal was given and away the man ran, over the hills and valleys, on and on.

In the distance he saw what at first he thought was a mirage, but what proved to be a lake. He leaped into a canoe and paddled to the farther side; he leaped out and said: "Ah! That is mine!" On and on he ran, over hills and valleys, driven by cupidity, avarice and greed. When at last he raised his eyes he staggered back, the sun had passed the meridian. He said: "I must retrace or I will lose it all." So he ran.

From the bank into the stream he leaped, and, swimming, wading and floundering, he clambered up the bank and on he hurried. Reaching the lake he leaped into the canoe and paddled to the other side. Then on he ran. Friends came to meet him. They saw he was about to lose. He threw off his coat, his hat, his vest. With his hair streaming in the wind and the perspiration rolling down his face, eyes bloodshot and almost bursting from their sockets, like Damon of old, he rushed on, and just as he reached the starting point he stumbled and fell at the stake, and as he did he cried: "I have won!" He remained motionless. They looked at him, and then, running to his side, they gazed upon his face, and he was dead.

He had won, but he had paid the price with his life. Yes, you will win that political office, but hell will be the price you will pay.

The Woman Who Taught Her Children to Lie and Then Whipped Them For It

DON'T be like a woman I heard of who lived down South. She looked out of her window one morning and saw a woman drive up with a carriage-load of kids, and she cried: "What have I done that I should be inflicted with this? What have I ever done to her that she should inflict all these kids on me today?" And then she sent her kids scurrying around.

"You take this out of the room," and "you take that out of the room," and the kids raced all around to get everything out of the room. The woman came up to the door and knocked, and she went to the door and said: "Oh, how do you do, Mr. Brown; I am delighted to see you, and I am so glad you brought the children with you."

Then she turned to the children and said: "Now, children, run and play, because you always have a fine time at Aunt's. 'London Bridge Is Falling Down,' 'My Fair Lady,' 'Tin, Tin, Who Has Got the Button?'" Finally luncheon was announced, and they sat around and talked awhile, and then Mrs. Brown said: "I must be going." And the other woman said: "Don't go yet; I have been wishing so long you would come, and I am awfully glad you came. I have intended to have you call for a long time, but the baby has been sick and the maid has been away. Now, don't wait so long before you come again, and good-by, and good-by, and be sure and bring the children with you." Kiss, kiss, kiss!

And no sooner had the door closed on her than she cried: "Bring me the smelling salts, quick!" And the kids began pulling the furniture that had been taken out, and the brie-a-bras, and in the confusion a china dog was broken in two, right in the middle. And she said: "Who broke that dog?" No one said a word. "Did you, Tommy?" Did you, Mary? Did you, Estella?" "No, ma'am." "Did you, Lucille?" "No, ma'am." "Well, one of you children is telling me a lie, and it won't be well for the one who is."

"Which one of you did it?" One of the kids turns State's evidence and takes an immunity bath. (You lawyers know what that is.) Well, they fastened the crime on the little culprit and he was taken into a side room and licked. And then she said: "Do you know why I did that?" He said, "Yes, ma'am." "What for?" "For breaking the doggie." "No, I didn't do it for breaking the doggie, although it was an heirloom that was given to me by my grandfather, who fought in the Revolutionary War. I whipped you for lying to me."

Where did that child learn to lie? He learned to lie from that old lying mother; that's where. That child saw that mother and heard what she said before the visitors came in, and heard what she said after they had gone. Where did it learn to lie? From that old liar that it calls mother.

The Parable of the Merchant and the Pearl

THERE once was a man who had vast estates. He sold them and with the proceeds he purchased a pearl of wondrous beauty and of fabulous price. He took passage on a ship and was going to sunny southern Italy, near where the sirens dwell; in mystical days, there to buy an old vine-clad castle and surround himself with a retinue of servants and pass his last years in ease and comfort.

As a guard for the security of his pearl he had a rosewood jewel casket made, inside of which he placed his pearl and locked the box with a golden lock and a golden key. Still dissatisfied with that provision for its security, he had a larger box made, inside of which he placed the former. He locked the second with a silver lock and a silver key. Still discontented, he had a strong oaken box made, with steel bands, and inside of this he placed the other two, and locked the third with an iron lock and an iron key.

One day, walking on the deck of the ship, to beguile the weary tedium of the journey, seeing a boy selling apples from a basket, he borrowed one—three—five—up to nine, and then he tossed into the air, and because of his legendary name and skill he had them dancing like golden globules and ruddy moons. The passengers, charmed by his skill, applauded him. He, flattered by their words and applause, returned the apples to the boy. Bowing low, he said, "Thank you, ladies, but if you will wait a few minutes I will show you what confidence I truly have in my skill. This is no test."

He hurried to the cabin, put the iron key in the iron lock—the silver key in the silver lock—the gold key in the gold lock—and reaching into the rosewood casket, he took the pearl from its velvet cushion. He so skillfully charmed him. He pressed it to his lips. He started for the deck when he met the captain. He said, "Captain, this pearl represents the toll, the sweat, the hardships and the saving of a lifetime, and I am going to exchange this for a castle and a life of ease, and for the turquoise slippers of Italy." The captain said, "Don't lose it." "Ha, ha, ha!" he replied, "you don't need to have any fear."

Returning to the deck he passed it to the ladies. They were charmed by its beauty. They handed it back to him, and he stepped to the gunwale of the ship. Leaning far over he tossed it in the air. Watching he caught it as it descended, saying, "There it is." Leaning farther over he tossed it higher than ever, and catching it he said, "Here it is." A lady screamed, and, seizing an apple from the little boy, said, "Here, take this, and if there is any further evidence needed to prove your skill, use the apple. Give me the pearl." He laughed her to scorn and said, "My eyes are as keen as an eagle's. My nerves are as true as the compass' magnetic needle."

Leaning farther over he threw it high in the air, watching it as it descended—when, suddenly, the old ship gave a lurch. Down into the fathomless depths went his pearl. The ship sped on. He smote on his breast, crying, "Fool! Fool that I was to risk my all, with nothing for pay but the plaudits of a passing crowd!"

And in this little story I have summed up many a life. You toss your soul for pleasure—for lust—for the applause of a Godless world. And hear me! The hour will come when you will toss it for the last time! The old frail body will give a lurch down to the depths of hell! You will be lost—and you will be lost forever—because you would not do God's will!

"Thank God for 'Billy' Sunday!" This shall be my lifelong prayer, for he has washed my soul whiter than snow and made it fit for Christ's service.
